

The University of Missouri and United States Department of Agriculture
Natural Resources Conservation Service present the annual

Soil Health Exposition

Rebuilding Soils for a Changing Climate

August 13-14 : Bradford Research Center : 4968 Rangeline Road, Columbia, MO

The two-day soil health exposition includes field tours of cover crop plots, a water infiltration demonstration and soil property information. Admission is free. Lunch may be purchased on site.

August 13: 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Keynote Speaker: Terry Taylor, long term no-tiller and cover crop innovator on Illinois claypan soils

Additional Topics: Field tours, soil pits, speakers on climate predictions (Pat Guinan, MU), soil biology (Kristen Veum, USDA), cover crop and soil health economics (Lauren Cartwright, NRCS), cover crops for Missouri (Jerry Kaiser, NRCS), improving water infiltration, effects of glyphosate on soil biology (Nigel Hoilett, NW MO State)

August 14: 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Keynote Speaker: Keith Berns, cover crop innovator and educator from Bladen, Nebraska

Additional Topics: Field tours, soil pits, MDC, DNR and NRCS programs, plant interactions and the environment (Jack Schulz, MU), Missouri farmers and their cover crop experiences (Luke Linnenbringer and Linus Rothermich)

Vendors include Equipment Exhibits and Seed Dealers.

For more information contact Kerry Clark at clarkk@missouri.edu or 573-884-7945.

The agenda is available at <http://bradford.cafnr.org>